Rebellious Child: Lord, I Surrender!: And God's promises for desperate hurting parents. Christina Fitz

If you are the parent of a prodigal, no doubt your story is laced with heartache. There is nothing quite like the helplessness and frustration of witnessing a beloved child self-destruct and throw their very life away on the evils of this world. You may be asking “Where are you God?” “What can I do?” Or, “What is Your plan for my child Lord?”

Christina Fitz has walked a difficult road with her own prodigal daughter. Facing addiction, suicide attempts, Oppositional Defiance, and all out teenage rebellion, she tells a story that has become familiar to many struggling parents.

It is difficult for parents without lost children to comprehend the emotional trauma a prodigal child brings into our lives, or how alone and desperate we often feel. This book was written to hurting parents, as an encouragement to see God working wherever you find yourself. You have not been forgotten. It is not your fault. You can find healing. Never lose hope, and never give up.

This book not only shares the traumatic, heart-wrenching true story of watching a beloved child spiral out of control, it brings hope and peace that can only come when we focus on the Lord. God will never give up on your child or on you. Peace and healing are within your grasp.

At the end of each chapter is a “Lessons Learned” section. Topics include; “What should we pray for our prodigal”?, “Are You there Lord”?, “Salvation” “Recognizing God’s voice”, “The Work of the Holy Spirit”, “Praying for Consequences”, “You are not alone”, “Boundaries and Respect”, “A Beautiful Testimony”, “Looking past the problem”, “Fear vs. Faith”, “Releasing your child”, “Forgiving yourself”, “Forgiving your prodigal”, “Jesus brings hope”, “Little by little”, “Opening the Door”, and more.

Prologue: A door opened to the left of the judge and Arielle was escorted into the room. Wearing an orange jumpsuit, with her wrists and ankles shackled together, she shuffled past the judge. Her body language oozed defiance, and she seethed with barely controlled hostility as she made her way to defendants table, where I was seated. She refused to look at me or her father and sat staring forward with an almost contorted expression. I examined her discreetly from the side and realized that I had no idea who this girl was anymore. There didn’t seem to be a trace of the child I had loved and had so many hopes and dreams for. Beside me sat a shell of a person, hard with hate and lost to the world.
