"Fantasy is better than reality, because reality always ends up disappointing you." William Booth, CEO, Man of My Dreams.

Investigating an alternative dating agency for the Valentine's day edition of glossy women's issues magazine Gloop, perpetually single Stephanie Carter stumbles upon 'Man of My Dreams', a company that appears to guarantee a perfect dating experience by matching you up with someone while you sleep.

Skeptical by nature, Stephanie is utterly convinced that what she will find is nothing but smoke and mirrors, but appreciates the opportunity to get out of the office anyway. When she realises the company operates out of the basement of a disused garage in a forgotten part of an industrial estate in Hounslow, she is all but ready to turn away, when the charismatic CEO convinces her to give his bizarre contraption a go.

Stephanie is here purely for work. She's not looking for anyone. She's been put off men for life, thanks to a cheating ex boyfriend, and then she meets Connor. She meets the man of her dreams.

Stephanie can't believe it. She can't stop thinking about him. She can't concentrate on anything else. He's perfect and he's already hers. The only problem? She doesn't know if he really exists.

Man of My Dreams is a story about the meaning of true love, for everyone who believes they'll never really find it.
