The decisions we make are influenced by a number of issues, and the most common problems include the fact that people tend to take on a narrow view, as well as overconfidence in our own predictions. In addition, we can easily get distracted by short-term emotions or fall victim to confirmation bias.

Who should read this book:

- People who want to learn how to make better decisions.
- Leaders and entrepreneurs who have to make important choices on a daily basis.
- Anyone interested in finding out more about the decision-making process and the factors that influence us.

In this summary:

Chapter 1: Try to take more possibilities into consideration when making a decision

Chapter 2: Explore more options rather than remaining fixed on one

Chapter 3: Get away from single-tracking and multi-track instead

Chapter 4: Avoid confirmation bias by actively looking for people who disagree with you

Chapter 5: Try to look at your situation from another perspective

Chapter 6: Create emotional distance with the 10/10/10 method

Chapter 7: Identify your core priorities and base your decisions on them

Chapter 8: Think of both the worst and best possible outcome of a situation

Chapter 9: Force yourself to take action with the help of a tripwire

Chapter 10: Follow the WRAP process to make better decisions
